

18th ENCATC Annual Conference 2010

Conference fees

The ENCATC Annual Conference is open to all organisations and individuals, whether they are members of the network or not. This year the conference format lasts 2 ½ days. In Brussels, the participants are invited to reflect upon two of the most important issues facing universities, training organisations and culture. Firstly there is increasing demand from governments, students and employers to focus education on gaining employment rather than enriching oneself intellectually as part of human and civil development. Is a focus on functional competences and skills in Cultural Management providing a poor education for dealing with more complex issues? As the economic downturn begins to really affect cultural spending for governments, with substantial cuts for arts budgets predicted can the creative sector be creative in its response to not just survive but thrive.
