NOTE FROM THE EDITOR

Dear colleagues,

Welcome to the November issue of ENCATC News. Although 2018 is winding down there are still several updates opportunities on cultural management and policy coming from Europe and beyond!

In this number 121, I invite you to discover about ENCATC’s latest work to influence policy, what took place in Tokyo at the ENCATC Academy on Cultural Policy and Cultural Diplomacy and the ENCATC International Study Tour. I hope the results of these activities inspire and motivate you to apply to the Japan-EU joint initiatives: a future joint call for proposals to co-finance consortia of excellent European and Japanese universities and a short-term staff-exchange programme for EU and MEXT officials to promote peer-learning and boost cooperation.

This month, we have unveiled two new issues of the /encatcSCHOLAR, your go-to resource for the latest teaching material on cultural management and policy. Issue #09 is dedicated to the theme of the 2017 ENCATC Congress “Click, Connect and Collaborate! New directions in sustaining cultural networks”. The second is a special issue published as part of the UNESCO-ENCATC project “Learning on intangible heritage: building teachers’ capacity for a sustainable future”.

I’m also excited to share that we have launched the Project Marketplace for members! Born from the need for members to find partners and make connection to exchange ideas in preparation for the Horizon2020 calls with a deadline in March 2019, this will be an extremely valuable tool and additional benefit to the membership.

The network is still growing its international dimension: you can meet our newest member to join from Taiwan and discover its field and area of expertise. Take advantage of news from our members who share calls, publications and announcements to boost your internationalisation.

Settle in with our new ENCATC in Contact Interview with the Promo P.A. Foundation in Italy who shares why they joined the network in 2018, what they’re working on, and expectations for the future. Also, learn how this institution is working in cultural heritage and how ENCATC members can benefit for their own work.

Looking ahead to 2019, I hope you will join me, ENCATC members and our loyal followers for the 2019 ENCATC Congress on Cultural Management and Policy next 2-5 October in Dijon, France. Be inspired and contribute your views as we address sustainability and diversity within, by and for culture. This topic will ignite a broader reflection and launch a debate on how the theme of sustainability and diversity is entering the cultural and creative sector, stimulating new perspectives in the sustainability discussion, and challenging the current and developing debates and models regarding cultural policy, management and education.

I wish everyone happy reading and success on the paths created from the knowledge and possibilities gained in your November issue of ENCATC News.

Yours sincerely,

Gianna Lia Cogliandro Beyens

INFLUENCING POLICY

ENCATC signs letter urging for European Parliament to boost funding for Creative Europe

On 13 November, ENCATC was among the 80 organisations from across the cultural and creative sectors who signed a joint letter in support of boosting funding for Creative Europe ahead of the plenary vote on the next EU Multiannual Financial Framework (MFF) 2021-2027 that took place on 14 November in Strasbourg.

ENCATC and the other organisations welcomed the recent BUDG vote on MFF proposing to increase the Creative Europe budget to €2.8bn, and called on members of the European Parliament to support this much needed boost to the only EU programme dedicated to cultural and creative sectors via three complementary strands.

This ambition was shared by MEP Silvia Costa in her report on Creative Europe, as well as by MEP Giorgos Grammatikakis in his report on a New European Agenda for Culture.

ENCATC was very pleased when on 14 November, the Parliament adopted its position on the future EU budget, with the proposed increase for the Creative Europe programme (to €2.8bn).

As it is now well established, culture and creativity are among Europe’s strongest assets. Their contribution to the social, economic and artistic development of Europe fully justifies the added value of EU investment in culture. But these sectors remain structurally underfunded. As highlighted in the impact assessment accompanying the invest EU proposal, the financing gap for creative SMEs and micro organisations across Europe is estimated to be somewhere between €8bn and €13bn.

ENCATC’s Annual Policy Debate reflects on governance practices for stronger cultural organisations

On the evening of 13 November in Antwerp, ENCATC held its 9th Annual Policy Debate: "All aboard! Cultural governance from a global perspective". It gathered 80 participants from Belgium, France, Hungary, Italy, the Netherlands, Slovakia, and the United Kingdom who were eager to learn about ways to improve quality and practice of cultural governance.

After a warm welcome from ENCATC Secretary General, Gianna Lia Cogliandro Beyens, the policy debate continued with interventions and lively exchanges with the panel of experts that included: Patrick Broekema, Governance Adviser, Cultuur + Ondernemen, The Netherlands; Ian King, Full Research Professor, University of Arts London, United Kingdom; Arnaud Pasquali, Deputy Head of Unit, European Commission (EACEA); Annick Schramme, Professor at University of Antwerp / Antwerp Management School, Belgium; and ENCATC Board member, Dea Vidović, Director of Kultura Nova Foundation, Croatia.

This debate shed light on the role of the board in the management of cultural organisations, differences between European countries, and hot topics of governance accountability, transparency, diversity, participation and authority applied in Europe’s cultural sector.

It was also the occasion to launch a new publication Cultural Governance in a Global Context. An International Perspective on Art Organizations, which is a collaboration between two ENCATC members from the University of Antwerp and the University of Arts London. In attendance were researchers, innovation providers, policy makers, representatives from cultural institutions, start-ups and incubators, business companies, creatives, pioneers from technology and economics, and European institutions representatives.

The plenary sessions and the High Level breakout session on 15 November were web streamed and can be watched here.

ENCATC in Bratislava to support claim for a strong theatre sector in Europe

On 30 November in Bratislava, ENCATC was in Bratislava, Slovakia, to show its support for the need of a strong theatre sector in Europe during the International Theatre Conference "Diversity in Action" organised by the European Theatre Convention (ETC).

On the occasion, ENCATC was officially represented by its member (and former board member) Svetlana Waradzizina from the Academy of Performing Arts in Bratislava (VSMU).

Like the major players in the field of theatre, ENCATC also believes that European contemporary creation is a fundamental condition when promoting cultural and linguistic diversity while safeguarding and enhancing European cultural heritage based on principles of artistic freedom of expression and democratic values of equality, tolerance, non-discrimination and solidarity.

ENCATC shares the vision that there is a need to give a special role of theatre and performing arts as safeguarding European art of creation and heritage to ensure cultural and linguistic diversity. Second, to include European creation to the general objective of the Creative Europe proposal; and third, to develop sector specific initiative for theatre and performing arts in view of nationalistic movements and threads to hinder creation, artistic freedom of expression and democratic values, to reach large and diverse European audiences.

Finally, ENCATC joins in the belief that there is a need for the creation of a European Theatre Forum which would be a forum of debate and visionary thinking, exchange of artistic development and information resource to advance professionally across the sectors’ diverse specifications. It would also become a cluster sector meeting allowing access to the European theatre scene, not just for European performing arts professionals, but also from outside of Europe. The forum would be a place to highlight best practice works of European cooperation in theatre and performing arts. There would be a component to reinforce a European identity and European cultural policy making. Last, but not least it would strengthen theatre as an important art form.

Two new issues of /encatcSCHOLAR deliver inspiring new teaching material for cultural management and policy

The /encatcSCHOLAR is unique tool for education and lifelong learning on arts and cultural management and policy.

Composed of articles, exclusive interviews, case studies, conference reports and more, /encatcSCHOLAR was born to satisfy the growing demand for the latest teaching material from academics, researchers, cultural operators and students in over 40 countries around the world.

The latest issue N.9 is part of the legacy of the 25th ENCATC Congress on Cultural Management and Policy “Click, Connect and Collaborate! New directions in sustaining cultural networks” that took place in September 2017 in Brussels. With this new publication, ENCATC wants to further explore this topic and make a contribution for its study in cultural management and policy classrooms.

The issue is devoted to the topic of the sustainability of networks, understood as the common effort to enhance the relationship between cultural projects and sustainability through cooperation. It includes three Case Analyses. First, Olga Kolokythia (University of Vienna) discusses the evolution of the European Opera Centre in relation to the cultural landscape and how networks and synergies have changed its course. Next, Zuzana Timcikova (Slovak Academy of Science) outlines the principles in the management of independent theatres and how they challenge the current cultural and legislative context in the Slovak Republic. By focusing on the evolution of the Dwie Ole collective, Aleksandra Tatarczuk exemplifies in her article the possibility of transforming an unutilized greenery belt into a public neighbourhood garden for collective use.

The Angles section includes two articles. ENCATC member, Nina Loustarinen (Humak University of Applied Sciences) narrates the creation of the Lights on! Project, which attempted to create a joint network of historical tourist attractions in Finland and Estonia. Irma de Jong (Cicerone Music & Art) highlights the importance of understanding intergenerational differences to enhance communication within the arts and music industry.

In her article on network governance, Anna Steinkamp (independent consultant) provides a context on how to make international networks of cultural cooperation more effective and sustainable.

The section Teaching Experience by Rui A. S. Esteves (Portugal) deals with the importance of cybersecurity education for children to protect their privacy and keep their networks safe.

Last but not least, an Interview by Ginevra Addis (IMT Lucca, a member of ENCATC) with Lucy Latham (Julie’s Bicycle) will help to understand how cultural networks can favour sustainability given the development of necessary leading skills.

ENCATC has also produced a special issue in 2018 on Learning on Intangible Cultural Heritage. It’s part of the legacy of the UNESCO-ENCATC project “Learning on intangible heritage: building teachers’ capacity for a sustainable future”. The project aimed to revisit the training programmes of universities, as well as to strengthen their capacity building in ICH and, by doing that, help UNESCO raise awareness about the 2003 Convention and its purpose.

The results of the mapping of higher education programmes teaching ICH - carried out in the framework of that project - are presented in the newly created Research section. The section Network has a contribution by Frederic Vacheron, Director of Villa Ocampo UNESCO Observatory, who explains the process of creation and characteristics of the Latin America and the Caribbean Academic Cooperation Network on ICH (ReCA PCI LAC). In the Case Analysis section, Ilaria Guglielmetti and Agostina Lavagnino, from the School of Design of the Polytechnic University of Milan and the Etnographical and Social History Archive of Lombardy Region, respectively, share their experience in developing their “Intangible Search Inventory”. Finally, a piece on the round table organized in the framework of the UNESCO-ENCATC project is included in the Proceedings section.

The Voice of Places

On the occasion of the 16th edition of the LOOP festival in Barcelona (12-22 November 2018) Espronceda Center for Arts and Culture, a member of ENCATC, presented “The Voice of Places” project curated by Valentina Casacchia related to places as architecture of emotions. The latest research of the artist, photographer, and ENCATC member, Savina Tarsitano in collaboration with the composer Maya Barsacq was accompanied by two film screenings produced by Davide Gambino: Maredolce-La Favara. The International Carlo Scarpa Prize for Gardens 2015, realized with and for Benetton Foundation and Pietra Pesante, winner of Best Documentary of New York Film Academy in 2013.

Following the theme of LOOP, which this year focuses on “production” here intended as the relationship between the producer and the product, the works of the three artists build a narrative on identity. By embodying different perspectives and variations, the meeting point of the artists’ research is the familiar glance they look through and to the past.

Thanks to her personal growth full of public and private experiences, the artistic research of Savina Tarsitano focused on the concept of “land”, winding through stays in themed places such as islands, abbeys and castles. The works, which have different languages, have taken the shape of visions embodied in a relationship with the environment that, beyond its manifest characteristics, is configured as a visual territory.

International project “Kids’ Guernica” celebrates the European Year of Cultural Heritage

On 20 November, the balconies of the Plaza Vieja in Havana, Cuba, hosted a large exhibition of canvases from the international project Kids’ Guernica, created in 1995 with the aim of promoting the creation of paintings with the same dimensions of the work “Guernica” by Pablo Picasso (3.50 x 7.80 m), containing messages of peace issued by children around the world, through the plastic arts.

This international project arrived in Cuba for the first time in 2015, at the Biennial of Art of Havana, thanks to the management of the Embassy Rebirth / Third Paradise Cuba, an initiative of the Italian artist Michelangelo Pistoletto. ENCATC member, Savina Tarsitano, one of the ambassadors of the Third Paradise in the world and also promoter and activist of “Kids’ Guernica”, is the one who brings this project to Cuba. The exhibition also serves to celebrate the European Year of Cultural Heritage, the World Children’s Day and the Week of Italian Culture in Cuba.

In this exhibition, around 15 canvases were exhibited in collaboration with the Office of the City Historian, ENCATC, the CNAP, the Italian Embassy in Cuba, Continuous Art, the Espronceda Art and Culture Center, the A+ Teen Center , UNICEF and FAO, as well as community projects, including Barrio Habana, Granjita Feliz and Casa del Niño y la Niña. BY SIMENG CHANG, ENCATC MEMBER, BURGUNDY SCHOOL OF BUSINESS

On 23 November in Dijon, as part of the “Forum Entreprendre dans la Culture” in of Burgundy-Franche-Comté, the research workshop “Cultural Heritage and Cultural and Creative industries in the European Year of Cultural Heritage (EYCH)” has successfully taken place in Burgundy School of Business (BSB), a member of ENCATC.

The "Forum Entreprendre dans la Culture" is an initiative of the French Ministère de la Culture and has been labelled ENCATC EYCH- European Year of Cultural Heritage 2018. Conventions and International Recommendations on Cultural Heritage. Social Effect and Practices of Opportunity

This interdisciplinary workshop “Conventions and International Recommendations on Cultural Heritage. Social Effect and Practices of Opportunity” (Conventions et recommandations internationales sur le patrimoine culturel. Effets sociaux et pratiques d’opportunité) on 14 January 2019 at the University of Cergy Pontoise, a member of ENCATC, is devoted to international conventions and recommendations on cultural heritage.

The focus of this workshop is necessary in order to describe their social effects and the practices of opportunity they provoke in heritage, political, cultural or associative institutions. Creating new uses of culture and revealing specialized actors, international conventions modify the social field and produce new spaces for expression and interaction in cultural policy.

Using a comparative perspective, the objective will be first to grasp the different modalities of appropriation of international conventions, led by individuals or groups who use them as powerful means to achieve their goals and, then to address their social and political efficacy.

ENCatC CONTACT: Cécile Doustaly
For this ENCATC in Contact Interview we had a talk with Annalisa Giachi, Research Manager at the PROMO P.A. Foundation, a new member of ENCATC. We wanted to learn more about their motivations for joining the network, their expectations being an ENCATC member, and how they hope to contribute to the network’s mission.

What are your reasons to become an ENCATC member?
PROMO P.A. FONDAZIONE was founded in 2003 as a research foundation oriented to operate in the field of education, cultural heritage and capacity building for public administrations.

PROMO P.A. wants to promote and support the reform, innovation and improvement of Public Administration through research, consulting, training and design activities.

Within this framework, we decided to join the ENCATC network to share our vision and competence on cultural heritage with the other members of the network. The strategic aim is to create synergies and a joint system of professional exchanges to improve the quality of our projects and services.

In the field of training and research, our Foundation aims at expanding its activities at the European level, focusing on EU policies for the enhancement, promotion and integrated development of cultural heritage.

It is also in the Foundation’s interest to participate in joint fairs, public tenders, events and other initiatives.

What are your expectations concerning the ENCATC network?
By joining ENCATC, PROMO P.A. wants to increase its network of contacts at European and international levels, set up new partnerships and fruitful collaborations with the best community practices.

The field of research could certainly have a new impetus and be enriched with ideas, knowledge, professionals, experiences, and create an added value of inestimable value.

We are also very much interested in training activities in the field of cultural heritage and, through ENCATC, we will be able to share experiences and best practices with universities, innovation hubs, training schools, etc.

What will be your contribution to the network’s mission?
Over the years, our Foundation gained a great deal of experience in research, cultural design and vocational education in the field of cultural heritage, that we wish to disseminate to the network.

Our core business concerns cultural heritage in a wider sense, with its connections with tourism and local development.
In this field:

- We organize a national event (and related exhibition), called Lu.Be.C, on technologies and news businesses applied to the cultural heritage (https://www.lubec.it/en);
- We coordinate and promote the implementation of the Cultural Cities Network - an Italian network of 70 cities strongly focused on cultural development (http://www.retecittadellacultura.it/);
- We supported and are supporting lots of candidate cities for the Prize “Italian Capital of Culture”.

Ms. Francesca Velani, Director of Lu.Be.C and chief of the Culture Sector of the Foundation, is actually working as a project manager for the City of Parma, which will be the Italian Capital of Culture in 2020 (we prepared for them the application plan and now we are coordinating the implementation) and we think this expertise would be useful also for the European Capitals of Culture.

Thanks to the experience of Lu.Be.C, one of the major Italian fairs and exhibitions dedicated to culture, PROMO P.A. would like to share with ENCATC and its network of more than 150 speakers and exhibitors coming from the private and public sector. The basic idea is to transfer innovation through the strategic planning for culture in order to make culture become, inside the public administrations, a basic pillar of the public strategies and policies for the development of the territories.

Do you have any other projects you are working on that are interesting for ENCATC members and followers?

PROMO P.A. is also a training agency accredited by the Region of Tuscany, which organizes training courses for the innovation of public administration, especially on cultural heritage. It is in charge of course design, recruitment of teachers, logistics and organization, preparation of training materials, monitoring and evaluation. These skills can be enhanced by the ENCATC network to carry out joint training courses, share professionals, teachers and experts in the field of cultural heritage.

With a Degree in Political Science and a master in European projects design, Annalisa Giachi is actually head of research at PROMO P.A. Fondazione where he coordinates several consulting activities as project manager. She is an expert in the design and implementation of research projects, support and technical assistance in the economic and social field. Her main areas of activity are administrative simplification, micro and small enterprises, tourism and territorial marketing, local economic development, public procurement, PA reform. Author and coordinator of numerous publications.

Consultant on the Study Crowdfunding4Culture
In order to fully exploit the potential of the Robert Bosch Cultural Managers Network (RBCM Network), a group of Master students from Heilbronn University of Applied Sciences, Germany evaluated the network and identified central aspects for its further development.

The idea of networking has experienced a renaissance in recent years. Numerous publications (Cvjeticanin, 2011; Laaksonen, 2016; Henze, 2018) highlight the importance of networks, especially in and for the cultural sector. Sponsors who have been funding by outcome-oriented criteria for decades also increasingly accept the idea and understand that it can be quite expedient to bring innovative people together and wait and see what can result from these meetings.

In the meantime, however, a first disillusionment or fatigue after the network hype is noticeable. Too often, pure networking, often reduced to business card exchanges, has been overemphasized at the expense of content. The scattering losses are therefore too high and the technical added value is low. The European Union in particular is no longer promoting new networks, but wants to see ‘results’ from the beneficiaries. That is a pity. Much more research, including on the long-term impact and adequate organisational structure of networks particularly in the cultural sector, would be necessary.

Identifying and properly exploiting potential
During the session Network 4.0: The importance of international and interdisciplinary networks. A practical guide! at the ENCATC Annual Conference in Brussels in September 2017, which was chaired by Victoria Durrer and myself, it became clear that the alleged non-binding character of these associations can be quite problematic and that many active members of networks have a need for discussion and advice on topics of organisation and sustainability.

In addition to large networks such as ‘EUNIC’, ‘On the Move’ or ‘ENCATC’ with corresponding administrative structures and financial resources, there is a large number of smaller networks that are largely dependent on the voluntary commitment of their members due to their size and limited financial resources.

One such network is the Robert Bosch Cultural Managers Network (RBCM Network), which was founded five years ago and brings together graduates of the renowned Robert Bosch Cultural Manager programs as well as alumni of the programs Tandem Europe, Tandem Shaml, and Actors of Urban Change. It has about 300 members from a large number of nations, all of whom have international experience and are now active in various countries around the world. On Facebook, the network has over 5,000 followers. This pool of highly qualified people with expertise in quite high-ranking positions in the international cultural sector is what business economists commonly call ‘asset’. Those responsible for the RBCM network are aware of the potential, want to further professionalize the network in the future and position their services even better in a thoroughly confusing ‘network market’. In order to drive this process forward, Master students of Business Administration in Arts, Leisure and Sports Management at Heilbronn University of Applied Sciences, Germany were commissioned to evaluate the RBCM network after a successful pitch in the summer of 2017.

Challenges within voluntary structures
Part of this evaluation was a quantitative and qualitative empirical study that was conducted during the winter semester 2017/2018. Using an online questionnaire, qualitative interviews with members and selected experts, a stakeholder analysis, comprehensive literature research and a closer look at similar (alumni) networks, the Master’s students developed a comprehensive inventory of the members, their professional fields and interests, their media use and their knowledge/acceptance of the numerous offers. This resulted in several recommendations for the further development and positioning of the network. On January 25, 2018, the students presented their results to the two speakers of the network Virag Major from Hungary and Gwendoleen Sharp from France as well as to Sarah Herke of MitOst e.V. from Berlin at the campus in Künzelsau.

In essence, the students identified topics that most network organisers will be familiar with: internal and external communication, member motivation, financing, organisational structure, unique selling point and knowledge management were the cornerstones on which suggestions for further development were made. To optimize the implementation process, so-called ‘key performance indicators’ have also been named. A time bar was used to show at which time which milestones should be reached and how what has been achieved could be re-evaluated. Various other international networks were used as benchmarks or smart practices. The special organisational form of the fluid network with greater fluctuation and voluntary commitment was the special feature as well as the challenge for evaluation and consulting.

Growing field of work for cultural managers
This evaluation and counselling process has not only made it possible for students to deal with the increasingly important topic of evaluation and to deepen the urgently needed knowledge of empirical social research. It has also necessitated an intensive and practical examination of innovative forms of organisation and financing in the cultural sector. At the same time, the students got to know a large number of important international actors and became familiar with the importance but also difficulty of active, voluntary networking.

The RBCM network’s special focus on promoting and advancing projects that focus on the social effectiveness of art and culture and actively participate in shaping social transformation processes led to fruitful discussions about the social design possibilities of artists and cultural managers and the tension between art and management. Not everything that an economist would find useful to ensure the continuity of a network is also in line with the goals and identity of the RBCM network. When choosing potential sponsors, especially for awards or prizes, the philosophy of the network and its members must not be lost sight of. As a result, some of the partners here have to be dropped from the outset.

Acquiring of important competences
In addition to the gain of knowledge, the expansion of the method canon and also the considerations for the professional presentation of the study results in English, came the aspect of teamwork under time pressure. This case study was challenging and excellently suitable at many levels to develop not only a multitude of competencies but also the ability to discourse and a feeling for current issues as well as for the social responsibility of cultural managers.

We would like to thank the responsible persons of the Robert Bosch Cultural Managers Network for the trust they have placed in the students by commissioning them with this evaluation project. We were assured that it was not disappointed. The representatives of the network took along many suggestions, which were discussed in detail the next day in an internal strategy meeting and are to be implemented promptly. The comprehensive evaluation report was made available to all members of the network. This practical transfer of science is beneficial for both sides and we hope that even more organisations/associations/networks will seek exchange with cultural management programmes.

Music Festivals, a Changing World. An International Comparison

ENCATC members Lluís Bonet from the University of Barcelona and Michel Guérin from the Observatoire des Politiques Culturelles / Fédération Wallonie-Bruxelles collaborated to edit with Emmanuel Négrier the book Music Festivals, a Changing World. An International Comparison.

Despite the seniority of a few pioneers, the festival remains a new idea in Europe. The diversity of such a phenomenon, in terms of style, scale, public support or cultural significance, has long been an obstacle to comparative analysis.

_This is the first international comparative study of music festivals using a uniform style of investigation_, including nine national samples of festivals, to which have been associated individual events from six other countries. The comparison focuses on 396 music festivals, representing a wide variety of genre, musical style, size and seasonal programming. All their major challenges are discussed: their artistic and cultural goals, their human and financial resources, and event their business models.

The first part of the book takes stock of this reasoned journey into the world of festivals. The second part presents several national chapters that can better take into account the cultural, economic and political context in which these events are created and deployed. This dual international comparison allows us to go beyond the image of national models frozen in their opposition, an opposition long overcome by artists themselves.

Cultural Governance in a Global Context. An International Perspective on Art Organizations

ENCATC members Ian King from the University of the Arts London and Annick Schramme from the University of Antwerp/Antwerp Management School have edited a new publication entitled Cultural Governance in a Global Context. An International Perspective on Art Organizations.

This original book explores the character of cultural governance of arts and cultural institutions in eight countries across five continents. Examining strategy and decision-making at an organisational level, this is the first empirical contribution on cultural policy and management, revealing how it is applied across the globe in otherwise unexplored countries.

Concerned with the assumption that ‘one-size fits all’, the chapter authors analyse how cultural governance is managed within arts organizations in a range of countries to assess whether some locations are trying to apply unsuitable models. The chapters aim to discover and assess new practices to benefit the understanding of cultural governance and the arts sector which have as yet been excluded from the literature. As a collection of local accounts, this book offers a broad and rich perspective on managing cultural governance around the world.

MEMBER STORIES - POOLING KNOWLEDGE FOR EU PROJECTS

Make Culture, Make Europe
5 December, Turin, Italy

ENCATC members involved in two European projects, Adeste+ and Be SpecACTive are organising a face to face "Make Culture, Make Europe" in the name of cultural participation on 5 December in Turin, Italy.

This event is an opportunity to find answers to questions such as: Why is Europe so interested in cultural participation? What happens to artists when they plan with their audiences? And what about organizations when they put them at the centre? What is the relation between cultural participation and democracy?

The event is organized by Adeste+ and Be SpecACTive!, two European projects that operate in culture and performing arts (theater/dance) that last July won the competition announcement by the Creative Europe program of the European Commission.

In the next four years both projects will work on the processes of cultural participation. The projects are headed by two Italian organizations - ENCATC member, the Fondazione Fitzcarraldo for Adeste+ and the Associazione CapoTrave/Kilowatt for Be SpecACTive! - and are united by a goal: to experiment with forms of collaboration between cultural and public organizations, putting citizens at the centre of artistic and organizational processes.

Adeste+, with its 15 partners (that also includes ENCATC members Fondazione Fitzcarraldo, The Audience Agency, MeltingPro, and the Kultura Nova Foundation) in 11 cities of 7 European countries, acts on cultural organizations to experiment with organizational and policy processes (working on Audience Development). Be SpecACTive!, active since 2014, continues its European mission. In this new edition the project involves 19 partners, (including ENCATC members Fondazione Fitzcarraldo and the University of Barcelona) located in 18 cities and in 15 European countries and continues to experiment with participatory practices that involve actively the spectators/citizens in the artistic and organizational processes (working on the Audience Engagement).

Cultural Leadership as Situated Practice

A new project "Cultural Leadership in a Situated Context" was submitted for funding to COST, the European Cooperation in Science and Technology, which is Europe’s longest-running intergovernmental framework for cooperation in science and technology.

Cultural institutions are increasingly called upon to extend their strategies and realize connections with pressing societal concerns, such as urban developments, globalization, and migration. These concern deeply affect society. The capacity of art and culture to relate to these concerns is uncontested. The actual working of cultural leadership praxis in shaping a productive relation between these global issues and local cultural identity is however not yet completely understood.

The project "Cultural Leadership in a Situated Context" (CLASP) aims to realize a network for transnational research and capacity building in order to tackle existing fragmentation of knowledge in this field. The consortium consists of 28 participants in 21 European countries. Among them counts ENCATC and 9 members from: the University of Antwerp/Antwerp Management School, (Belgium); South-West University “Neofit Rilski” (Bulgaria); the University of Jyväskylä (Finland); the Institut für Kultur- und Medienmanagement (Germany); the University of Groningen (the Netherlands); the Faculty of Drama Arts, University of Arts Belgrade (Serbia); the University of Barcelona (Spain); Istanbul Bilgi University (Turkey).

European cultural heritage strategy for the 21st century. From principles to reality

ENCATC member Claire Giraud-Labalte had an article entitled “European cultural heritage strategy for the 21st century. From principles to reality” selected for publication in the Revista Patrimonio n°5, published in September 2018.

The present world is facing new challenges that prompt us to reconsider the role of cultural heritage in redefining our societies, as well as to reposition heritage policies at the heart of an integrated approach. To maintain and extend the efforts made by Member States and develop a sense of cooperation among them is the ambition of the European cultural heritage strategy for the 21st century, as it was launched by the Council of Europe in May 2017. Highly inspired by the Faro Convention (2005), Strategy 21 provides a framework based on the core values of the Council of Europe and on an inclusive approach where in order to achieve its goals it needs to align principles with action. Centred on the knowledge and education component, both of which strongly affect the relationship between heritage and society, this article focuses on practical experience issues.

CALL FOR PAPERS:
Democratising the arts and the arts sector

DEADLINE: 15 January 2019

This is a call for papers for the Annual Gathering of the Network Brokering Intercultural Exchange which will take place from 23–25 May 2019 at Heilbronn University, Campus Künzelsau, Germany.

Bringing international researchers together with arts and cultural practitioners and policymakers, the AHRC funded network Brokering Intercultural Exchange has aimed to build an understanding of the relationship of arts and cultural management practice and education to intercultural exchange – interaction between communities, institutions, and/or nations with different “values” and perspectives and individuals with different social, economic and religious backgrounds.

Papers and provocations are welcome that consider the following questions (among others):

- How does the arts sector define diversity, taking into account that discrimination is not limited to ethnicity but exists also because of gender, sexuality, religion, class or (dis)ability?
- How is this diversity currently experienced in the arts sector by artists, audiences / participants and arts and cultural managers?
- How do these understandings and experiences relate to larger socio-political concepts and public policies regarding democracy, equality and social justice?
- What are the emerging challenges and opportunities these understandings and circumstances present to the sector as a key aspect of the social world?

CALL PARTNERS: How Digitalization Affects Value Creation in Cultural and Creative Industries in Europe. The new challenges for creativity, intellectual property rights and copyright

DEADLINE: 10 December 2018

Nowadays, cultural and creative industries are changing due to the digital era. Some research shows that CCIs are threatened (Dobusch & Schussler, 2014; Menard, 2016; Waldfogel, 2012), meanwhile others suggest that these industries are now open to new opportunities (Elkin-Koren, 2017; Zhao, 2014). Any case, CCIs are now facing new challenges (Robergue, Nantel & Rousseau, 2017), that require attention for both researchers and practitioners.

The main purpose of this Horizon2020 project is to understand the evolution of the CCIs during the last decade due to the rising of the digital economy, just to diagnose today’s situation, and by observing the trends of CCIs and the digital economy, propose a roadmap for CCI producers/distributors/intermediaries business strategies, cultural policies and intellectual property policies for the next decade.

The focus will be on the following aspects concerning CCIs to be covered by the project: Digitalization, Consumer culture; Cultural Policies; Learning models; Innovation; Patenting; Finance; and Research.

The project consortium will be led by ENCATC member, Fundación Iberoamericana de las Industrias Culturales y Creativas and includes already the Universidad Miguel Hernandez and the research team in Cultural &Creative industries (Antonio José Verdú Jover). Taiwan Association of Cultural Policy Studies. Asian Network of Cultural Intermediaries Forum

On 2 and 3 November, the first forum of The Asian Network of Cultural Intermediaries (ANCI) convened in Panchiao, New Taipei City. Hosted by the Taiwan Association of Cultural Policy Studies, with whom ENCATC has a Memorandum of Understanding, and the National Taiwan University of the Arts, a member of ENCATC, delegates came to share their expertise and discuss the roles of cultural intermediaries in cultural governance.

Participants of the 1st ANCI Forum concluded that an Asian network across various cultural sectors and art professions is necessary and required, as it would serve as the hub and platform for the meeting up of cultural practitioners, researchers and professionals in the region.

Through exchanges and cooperation, ANCI dedicates to identifying the best practices of cultural management and governance among varied cultural intermediaries in Asia, including the Arts Council, Cultural Agency, Cultural and Exchange Foundation, or Film, Tourism and Research Institute. ANCI has the potential to perform as a cultural think tank, which provides concrete cultural policy advocacies based on solid research and pragmatic experience of regional cultural practices.

The hosting institutions of the 1st ANCI Forum, Taiwan Association of Cultural Policy Studies and the National Taiwan University of Arts, in collaboration with all national and international cultural partners, welcome new initiatives on specialised cultural forums, joint research projects, and all forms of cultural collaborations in the near future. With support from Ministry of Culture, National Culture and Arts Foundation in Taiwan, it is expected that the next ANCI Forums will play a more prominent role in the sphere of international cultural governance, connecting and networking all the participating international cultural intermediaries and the local cultural partners.

PUBLICATION: “Understanding Cultural Policy”

Understanding Cultural Policy provides a practical, comprehensive introduction to thinking about how and why governments intervene in the arts and culture.

Cultural policy expert Carole Rosenstein examines the field through comparative, historical, and administrative lenses, while engaging directly with the issues and tensions that plague policy-makers across the world, including issues of censorship, culture-led development, cultural measurement, and globalization. Several of the textbook’s chapters end with a ‘policy lab’ designed to help students tie theory and concepts to real world, practical applications.

This book will prove a new and valuable resource for all students of cultural policy, cultural administration, and arts management.

HERITAGE-PRO. Improving cooperation on cultural heritage conservation

For many years, ENCATC has been committed to preserving our cultural heritage. Now the commitment has been honoured by the European Commission: ENCATC is the only Brussels-based global network partner in a European consortium developing a vocational training programme for heritage managers. What is special about it is its interdisciplinary approach: all occupational groups involved in conservation measures are to be qualified together.

HERITAGE-PRO is the name of the European initiative, which is concerned with the interdisciplinary training of specialists from various disciplines for the sustainable management and conservation of cultural heritage. HERITAGE-PRO is a contribution to the European Year of Cultural Heritage 2018 and will be implemented by institutions from Germany, Austria, Sweden, Spain and Belgium. The main objective is to improve the interdisciplinary skills of cultural heritage managers across Europe.

HERITAGE-PRO brings disciplines together

“The preservation and management of cultural heritage usually takes place in knowledge silos, since the disciplines are neither trained nor experienced in order to work together in a predefined and professional way,” says ENCATC Secretary General, GiannaLia Cogliandro Beyens, describing the initial problem. The formal training of art historians, conservators, craftspeople and culture managers neglects competences, which are essential for successful and cost-efficient preservation measures. They are trained to become specialists in their field, but hardly ever learn to organise interdisciplinary knowledge and to make decisions based on it. The consequences can be serious: Consequential damage to buildings or works of art, additional costs, and even lengthy legal proceedings to clarify questions of guilt.

The challenge is to bring together these different disciplines, skills, expectations and visions in the restoration of cultural heritage sites such as castles and palaces in order to avoid future conservation measures or limited use of cultural heritage. In recent years, there has also been a special need to find professional mechanisms to involve volunteers in the best possible way.
Vocational qualification programme for the preservation of cultural heritage

HERITAGE-PRO experts will develop a multilingual vocational qualification programme by 2021 that integrates all the specialist disciplines involved that are necessary for the successful management of cultural heritage conservation. “We are very pleased to contribute to this ambitious project,” says ENCATC Secretary General, Gianna Lia Cogliandro Beyens. She expects that institutions from all over Europe will be interested in the project results. These will also contain practicable guidelines for cultural heritage managers to support them in demanding preservation and redevelopment measures.

The qualification programme will be tested in a European training camp lasting several days for future cultural heritage managers and young craftsmen. The aim is to familiarise young people with the programme as an instrument of successful interdisciplinary cooperation right from the start of their careers.

The initiative is aimed at experts from the field of monument preservation, such as cultural heritage experts, archaeologists, restorers, curators and art historians. Likewise, craftsmen working on cultural assets (plumbers, carpenters, bricklayers) are addressed. Also representatives of the public administration and political decision makers as well as experts for city and regional planning are invited to participate.

Museums in Europe and their Impact on Different Sectors - Breakdown from NEMO’s 26th Annual Conference

From 15-18 November 2018 in the 2018 European Capital of Culture, Valletta, Malta, 184 museum professionals, culture professionals and policy makers from 39 countries met at NEMO’s 26th Annual Conference to discuss the cross sectoral impact of museums. The conference affirmed that museums create different kinds of values to other sectors such as the social, tourism and the health sector, just to name a few.

Tibor Navracsics, European Commissioner for Education, Culture, Youth and Sport, welcomed the conference participants on 16 November 2018. On this occasion, he reaffirmed museums’ significant role in society: “Museums have an important role in building a cohesive Europe. They hold our cultural treasures and are vital in educating people, encouraging creativity, and providing incentives for the creative and cultural industries. As custodians of a range of diverse collections, all museums are in a powerful position to present stories that can build bridges between communities, regions and countries – and between the past and the future. This is a central aim of the European Year of Cultural Heritage and of the European Action Plan for Cultural Heritage, which I intend to present towards the end of the year to ensure that culture and cultural heritage remain at the top of the EU’s political priorities well beyond 2018. I am pleased that the Year has brought out so much enthusiasm across the Union, at all levels, to explore and connect all citizens with our shared roots, to raise awareness of our common history and values, and to reinforce a sense of belonging to a common European space.”
