

2021 ENCATC Annual Congress Education and Research Session

CALL FOR ABSTRACTS AND TEACHING DEMONSTRATIONS

Last Chance!

Deadline EXTENDED for submissions: 25 August 2021

Dear members and colleagues,

The 2021 ENCATC Congress on "Artists in the spotlight! In search of new agendas for education and research in the cultural management and policy field" will be organised from 19–22 October 2021 as an online event. Alongside this major international event, ENCATC will organise the 2021 Education and Research Session on Thursday, 21 October 2021.

You are invited to submit proposals for paper and/or teaching demonstrations. For the first time, ENCATC is providing a space for members to organize a special language session in German. Proposals from any relevant discipline will be considered, provided that they make an original academic and professional contribution to the study and practice of cultural management and cultural policy

TOPICS OF INTEREST

Themes related to the main topic of the 2021 ENCATC Digital Congress "Artists in the spotlight! In search of new agendas for education and research in the cultural management and policy field" are encouraged to critically reflect on the implications for cultural management and policy education and research of the situation of artists with regard to the current, multi-dimensional crisis, and before the scenario(s) ahead, considering not only the health crisis, but also other dimensions of the current context, such as climate change, societal changes, etc. A comprehensive view on the issue is proposed, which considers not only the status of the artist in terms of professionalization, standards, etc., but also encourages an examination of the roles assigned to artists in society and the territory in the forthcoming scenarios.

Contributions could be related, but not limited to the following tracks:

- 1. The role of artists and other cultural professionals in applying sustainability values in the cultural and creative sectors (CCS). What is the role of cultural professionals, managers and producers in applying in practice the sustainability values (not limited only to climate change issues or SDG topics, but also including other ethical dimensions, as well as regarding circular economy) in the work with artists and with cultural organisations that employ artists at their very centre? Along these lines, How can artists contribute to the way out of the current, multi-dimensional crisis at a societal level, beyond the CCS? And what is their role in recovery, as well as the role of cultural managers and policymakers to facilitate these processes? What implications may this have at an educational level?

2. The role of artists in the new agenda for research and education in cultural management and policy. How a new agenda for research and education in cultural management and policy could look like in the new scenario(s)? What should be the role of the artist in this new agenda?
3. A new agenda for cultural policy? How should policy echo the challenges faced by artists in the new scenario(s) and help them tackle them? What has been done at a policy level to support artists and reframe their working conditions and social security in the current context? Can we identify some recommendations for the shaping of a new agenda for cultural policy?
4. Old and newly developed [digital] formats, organisational and business models. Artists and the wider CCS have implemented from major adaptation to cope with the current crisis, in terms of formats – at the level of artistic production and delivery, with performing arts and festivals faced with the worst version of the pandemic effect – , but also in terms of organisational and business models. What will remain of the changes introduced? How this may impact cultural management and policy education programmes?
5. Impact of COVID-19 on the cultural and creative sectors. How have been artists affected by COVID-19? And the wider cultural and creative sectors? What are the outlooks for the future in relation to this?

All accepted papers will be published in an electronic book of proceedings (with ISBN number), which will be made public at the time of the Congress. In case you prefer not to have your paper included in the book of proceedings, we kindly ask you to let us know when submitting your proposal.
